

GEVREY-CHAMBERTIN LA BRUNELLE

APPELLATION VILLAGE

“A model for geologists and a paradise for the vine, producing one of the most accomplished versions of the Village Appellation Gevrey-Chambertin.”

Jacky Rigaud in Gevrey-Chambertin Joyau du Terroir

CLIMAT

La Brunelle is located at the heart of the projecting ledge which forms an excellent silt trap. This climat has been described by experts as “one of the greatest successes of the Combe of Lavaux’s alluvial cone.” On the surface brown soils predominate, just below are the limestone gravels that are effective in maintaining the heat. In the lower part of this climat, clustered piles of calcareous stones are to be found. A layer of sand and clay is situated two metres below the surface.

CHARACTER

A bright, clear appearance, intense in colour with deep violet flecks. Aromas of jammy cherries are sometimes revealed. An aromatic persistence that outclasses its Village appellation.

Surface area : 2,78 ha
Appellation total surface area : 3,0948 ha
Plantation year : 1953 - 1956 - 1963 - 1967
- 1979 - 1980 - 1983 - 1985 - 1997

PLOT

La Brunelle is inextricably linked to the history of the house, from which this remarkable plot takes its name. Domaine Henri Rebourseau is the exclusive proprietor of this appellation whose vineyard plot extends beyond the house and grounds within a large, walled enclosure.
